Each team carried a hand pump, a set of sample bottles, a notebook and a small scale. The scale drifted by a few grams over the week, so the team checked it against a reference weight every morning.